University Greets 1,600 Prospective Students at Open House

Founders’ Day Ceremony 2008

The Monmouth University Chorus and Ensemble then performed their rendition of “America the Beautiful” under the direction of David Tripoli, an Associate Professor of Music and Theater Arts department. President of Monmouth University, Paul Gaffney II, lead the ceremony, which he said was dedicated to reflecting on Monmouth’s 75 years of excellence in education.

Following President Gaffney’s opening remarks, Alfred J. Schiavetti spoke about the history of the University. Schiavetti was followed by Jeff Cook, the President of the Student Government Association.

Rock the Vote in Pollak

Pollak Theatre held MTV’s Rock the Vote hosted by Shane Landrum and Rachel Robinson on season 11 of Road Rules, Campus Crew last Wednesday, October 8.

The event was brought to campus by the Student Activities Board who researched and found Rock the Vote with MTV. “It was perfect timing with the upcoming election,” said Carolyn Bodmer, a registered voter and representative for the SAB. Although there was a miscommunication with the starting time, Robinson and Landrum quickly got deep into their presentation.

Robinson described the audience when Landrum and Robinson finally released their fifth album, “The Big Event.”

Prospective students split up to visit all of the academic departments they were interested in. The Monmouth College of Liberal Arts, the School of Business, and College of Osteopathic Medicine had tables set up with representatives to support them in and out of the classroom.

In addition to touring the campus, people could watch the Men’s Soccer team play against Robert Morris on the Great Lawn. Wilson Hall consisted of students and employees that will be here to greet them.”

The weather consisted of clear skies and a radiant sun as the Chamber Choir sang and President Paul Gaffney spoke to the crowd in front of Wilson Hall. After a welcome speech, and the extremely welcoming students and employees that will be here to greet them.”

Dear Colleagues and Students:

The global economic situation is in turmoil. You do not need me to tell you that. We are all focused on the topsy-turvy stock market and what Washington is doing to bring back some confidence. National leaders in other countries are also addressing their own financial challenges in this global economic environment.

This University must be prepared to endure through this economic climate and carry on, in what today can only be characterized as, an uncertain near-term future.

In the first few days of October, I directed that we stop new hiring, unless an offer had been made or a vacancy was caused by departure and other fees as its sources of funding. We will invest to attract students for the upcoming semester and next academic year. Within available funds, we will also focus on programs that support retention of our current students.

I am encouraged that for more than a decade Monmouth has kept tuition growth under control. That has made us one of the most affordable full-spectrum independent colleges in our region.

These are not easy times for anyone or any organization. When the economy settles down and finds its way, I will review these spending restrictions. Thank you for your understanding and continued strong performance in service of our students.

Sincerely,
Paul G. Gaffney II

It is in the long-term interest of the University and each of us individually to work together to significantly reduce costs without negatively impacting the educational and developmental experience we provide to our students.

Dr. Robin Mama Named Dean at New School of Social Work

PRESS RELEASE

Monmouth University is pleased to announce the Board of Trustees approved the formation of the School of Social Work and the appointment of Dr. Robin Mama as Dean, effective July 1, 2009.

Dr. Mama received the strong recommendation of the Social Work Dean Search Committee which did its work in anticipation of Board approval of the new School. In her role as Dean she will lead all programs, personnel and operations in Social Work to even higher levels of national recognition.

Dr. Mama brings very impressive credentials as a teacher-scholar and national and campus leader to her task. She has received the Distinguished Teaching Award and the Judith Stanley Fellowship from Monmouth University in recognition of her outstanding teaching and her commitment to infuse human rights into the Social Work curriculum. She is a published scholar in the areas of Social Work field practice, Social Work education in historical and global development, and she serves as Associate Editor for North America for Social Work Education: the International Journal. Dr. Mama is a national leader in Social Work as illustrated by her service as past Chair of the Council on External Relations for the Council on Social Work Education and as representative to the International Federation of Social Workers. On campus her leadership record includes her service as past Chair of the Faculty Council and as Chair of the Department of Social Work from 2004-2008, where she has led the faculty in establishing new international affiliations for the Masters in Social Work program and the creation of new lecture and continuing education opportunities.

Dr. Thomas Pearson, provost and vice president for academic affairs at Monmouth University, stated: “We are fortunate, indeed, that Dr. Mama is ready and willing to lead the School of Social Work in its inaugural period.”

The School of Social Work has been recognized by the profession’s national organizations and accrediting bodies. The MSW program is ranked as one of the Best MSW programs by the 2008 US News & World Report. In addition, the MSW program has also been honored by the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE) with their International Commissioning award for advancing the internationalization of social work education; and CSWE reaccredted the department in 2007. In 2006, the National Association of Social Workers’ New Jersey Chapter gave the MSW program their Trailblazer Award. The Sen-te and General Assembly of New Jersey recognized the “outstanding and praiseworthy program” in 2006.

The School of Social Work offers a Bachelor of Social Work degree and a Master of Social Work degree, both of which are based on a human rights and social justice framework. The Master of Social Work program offers two concentrations: Clinical Practice with Families and Children, and International and Community Development.

Tradition and Legacy

Last Wednesday I had the pleasure of attending the Convocation luncheon and ceremony to commemorate the University’s 75th anniversary. It really got me thinking about how long seventy-five and about how much can happen in that amount of time.

I’ll admit that prior to the ceremony I did not know much about the school’s history. After hearing the story about how it grew into the renown university we attend I began to draw parallels between the “American Dream” of starting with nothing and making it something great. I also surprised to learn that some of the school’s early history is lost to us. We may never know the exact details about how Monmouth Junior College (as it was known in 1933), but to me that seemed an appropriate part to such a long and rich history. Sometimes we don’t know the whole story and that’s what makes us appreciate what we do know of it.

I took away from that day a great sense of tradition and pride for this school. Something that has always bothered me is when I hear people trash-talking this school as if it wasn’t good enough. Up until this point it only bothered me because I couldn’t understand why a person would come here if they did not like it. Now that I know more about the school’s rich history, it more than bothers me. It is disrespectful to anyone who has helped to build this University into the fine institution we attend.

What these people have built and left for us is a legacy. It’s our job to continue the tradition of making this school better than it was before.

Over the last couple of weeks I’ve written about change and getting involved and I think this idea of creating a legacy really ties all of that together. The things we do as members of the Monmouth University community today will impact the way things are for the next generation. If we don’t do what we can and set an example with our actions and choices we will still be creating a tradition, but it will be one that impacts the school negatively. The cliché goes something like “if you don’t know where you come from, you can’t know where you are going”. So now that we know where we came from, where are we going?

I usually like to avoid writing what may appear to be overly partisan pieces (because I like to consider myself more moderate), but there are some serious injustices going on in this year’s presidential election. The falsehoods being thrown around are just atrocious. To make it interesting, I will defend only the Republican ticket in this article.

First, the number one issue in this election is the financial meltdown (and consequently the economy). In a CNN poll, 50% of Americans chose economic policy as their top concern. People are scared of a credit crunch, which is already underway. High oil prices (which have largely subsided) are still at the backs of minds. The lending practices of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac are the largest contributors to the meltdown. Many minds. The lending practices (and consequently the economy).

I think they have the cleanest rap of all that, just don’t hide behind it and say, “I stand by my judgment.” It would offer little new spending anyway, while still runn- ing the government more efficiently, just because he’s one of his party’s candidates. Obama is the decisive candidate. He has a track record of leading this country much better than McCain. Obama’s policy is exactly the opposite of good judgment.

In today’s world we are very familiar with web, about them. It is scary and stalker-like, but there’s no need to worry about this feature, on the web. It is scary and stalker-like, how teachers and employers look up student s or their employees names, what may appear to be overly par- tisan pieces (because I like to consider myself more moderate), but there are some serious injustices going on in this year’s presidential election. I think they have the cleanest rap of all that, just don’t hide behind it and say, “I stand by my judgment.” It would offer little new spending anyway, while still runn- ing the government more efficiently, just because he’s one of his party’s candidates. Obama is the decisive candidate. He has a track record of leading this country much better than McCain. Obama’s policy is exactly the opposite of good judgment.

The Political Bus Rolls

Andrew Schetter, Associate Sports Editor

On November 4, the 44 President of the United States will be decided and with the help of the political science club of Monmouth University students will be at campaign headquarters to witness the results.

The bus is organized by the political science club, but passengers on the bus are not required to be club members. Dr. Joseph Patten the faculty advisor of the political science club explains how to be a passenger on election night, saying, “Students can just come see me or come to the political science club meeting which are held on Tuesday afternoons at 3:45 in Bey Hall.”

The bus will depart at 7:00 p.m. and return around 1:00 a.m. and is free to all students who sign up. Once the bus departs students will travel to local campaign headquarters for both parties. Based on the national polls, the bus will try to reach the losing party first, and then go to the winning headquarters to experience the celebration. “The idea is to go from the funeral to the wedding.”

Students were able to register to vote any day in Bey Hall up until New Jersey’s last registering day on October 14. Students had the opportunity to register at the Rock the Vote rally on October 8. This rally was co-sponsored by the Student Activity Board and the Political Science Department, and featured former members of MTV’s reality shows the Real World Austin, Food Network’s Road Rules Campus Crawl, Rachael Robinson and Shane Landrum. This event was the last Rock the Vote rally held on campus prior to the close of registration.

Buzz around the bus has already begun on campus as Ryan Krogue, a junior Psychology major, said, “I plan on going and I am not a member of the political science department. I think the bus is a great idea and I’m looking forward to seeing what goes on at campaign headquarters on election night. It is one of those things I do not expect to be able to witness in my country. In the end, parties have to work together in our democratic government to accomplish anything. The united bus reinforces that ideal.”

DR. JOSEPH PATTPEN
Faculty Advisor of the Political Science Club

This is not the first time the political bus has rallied students on campus. Last year Dr. Patten took 35 students to the primaries in New Hampshire. Dr. Patten advised his first presidential trip while he was a professor in Iowa in 2008. This was the night of the famous confusion over the vote tabulations in Florida. That night he described, “Students witnessed two funerals because we went to each headquarters when they were told that they lost the election.”

The bus is used as a finale for the events leading up to the election. The events include debate watches in Wilson Auditorium and the Rebecca Stafford Student Center for every presidential debate.

Boylan gym will also host the Political Olympics where teams of 4-6 will compete in events such as hoops, soccer kick, and political trivia. The Political Olympics will be held on Halloween morning at 10:00 a.m. and prizes will be awarded for the winners.

At the end of the events, a tug of war will be held between Democratic and Republican supporters. According to Dr. Patten, the winning tug of war team has won the election in each year of the Olympics. A smiling Dr. Patten described, “All the more reason for Obama and McCain supporters to get involved in the political bus. This way they can know the results a few days early.”

Candidates’ Positions On Education

The presidential candidates’ views on affordability of college or university education is an issue that concerns Millennials. National Education Action Day coming up on Nov. 4, particularly in this time of economic crisis.

“...I think it is imperative for the candidates to be focusing on higher education because it may become really difficult for students to obtain loans in order to receive higher education,” said Heather White, a senior majoring in Communication.

Presidential candidates, Sen. John McCain and running mate Sarah Palin of the Republican Party, and Sen. Barack Obama and running mate Senator Joseph R. Biden Jr. of the Democratic Party, have shown concern about Higher Education Funding. In both candidates’ presidential websites, the candidates present programs, applications, and process for financial aid are complicated for students and their families. Furthermore, both Obama and McCain’s websites state that this procedure needs to be simplified.

The candidates talk about the simplification of the aid process, beginning with the application for the Financial Student Aid Application (FASFA),” said Associate Vice President for Enrollment Management & Director of Financial Aid, Claire Blesso. “While I don’t necessarily agree that the application is complicated...Students do fill out the forms only six times a year, while there is a process whereby the financial aid office systematizes and simplifies it. It is interesting to compare it to the student’s FASFA, which requires any necessary corrections.”

“I do not think the forms and the overall process is the issue at hand,” said White. “I think they need to make it easier for that 95 percent of Americans who fall that mid-class gap to afford college, because it is next to impossible for them.

McCain and Palin seek to give students a $5,250 annual tax credit and simplifying the process consists of eliminating the current federal financial aid application (FASFA)." McCain's plan is to simplify the process by checking a box on their tax form to authorize their tax information to be used. While Obama and Biden, on their official website, want to create a National Opportunity Tax Credit that will provide $4,000 for most American college students. Andrew Poag, the communication director of Obama’s N.J headquarters, said, "This (Tax Credit) includes students at private universities as well as public and community colleges and it is $4,000 each year of attending college." In this proposal, President Gaffney said, "Great, if our country can afford it." However, he said that more details are also needed. "I don’t like (Obama’s) $4,000 Tax Credit because of all the other spending," said senior Political Science major, Dan Wisekowski. "We are over $9 trillion in debt."

The recipients of this Tax Credit will have to do 150 hours of public/community service a year.

McCain and Palin also plan to fix the student lending programs. On referring to their official website, "McCain proposes an expansion of the federal student loan program and will create a new federal student loan program for eligible students. Effective reforms and regulations will increase the direct loans available to students. These actions will ensure the necessary funding of higher education aspirations, and create a simpler and more effective program in the process."

These are the major points that the presidential candidates have regarding funding for higher education. These are issues that share need to take these two possibilities of national service in exchange for education, said White. "I have heard rumors and suggestions, but why not pass legislation that will help the artistry in so many ways such as free tuition for people who cannot afford to earn degrees, volunteers helping our country through military, civic participation, community service, etc."

"One thing I think would benefit the graduates, though, is having the option to pay off financial aid with little to no interest," said Gaffney. "This new market will allow artists to perform new music is being shared and copied online. So the music industry has clearly changed. The only question now is just how much will it change? For that answer, only time can tell.

"In Rainbows," as a digital download, load last fall. Customers could then name their own price for the album, anywhere from $3.99 to 99.99¢ (they’re an English band). And according to a survey by comScore, the band averaged about 1.11€ per album, more than they would have made per record while signed to a label.

This sort of move is exemplary of the sea change rocking the industry, which has the major labels shaking in their Prada suits. They are the ones who are ultimately going to take the hit. For decades before, the major labels have controlled the pose of creating a band. They would sign some gaggle of young kids, give them a new image, send them to a fancy recording studio, and set them up in some nice hotels while they tour across the country. Of course first they would have their talent agents look over it. Andrew Kaza, a Junior and part-time comedian, comments on the recent tidbits in those bands, stating, "This new market will allow hipsters and other pseudo-cultural individuals to pretend to like even more bands that aren’t even good, but are rather an excuse to seek in individuality. Whereas it used to be that a music fan would buy one of their favorite bands from publishing rights, giving the rest to their label, times are begin-ning to change. The internet has given independent labels, who are more likely to nurture an artist rather than exploit them, a much better chance to grow.

The corporate giants aren’t real-ly digging this. Instead of adopt- ing to the changing tide, some are trying to sue it into submission. According to a report by Rick Karr on NPR.org, some record executives “want internet service providers (ISPs) and computer makers to pay record companies in proportion to how much of their music is being shared and copied online. So the music industry has clearly changed. The only question now is just how much will it change? For that answer, only time can tell.
The Story Behind a Local Legend

Students at Monmouth University have been talking about the local legend seen around some of Long Branch and Belmar’s hot spots.

No, it’s not a celebrity, or a superstar. This legend has been seen around bars such as Jack’s Rib and Ale and Stingers in Long Branch, as well as Bar Anticipation in Belmar. He is a favorite of the entire 21 year old and older Monmouth University crowd.

Standing at about five foot nine inches tall, half balding with crazy, out of control white hair and a thick white mustache, this character is known as Einstein. Einstein is infamous for being around every college bar night wearing his favorite slacks, a t-shirt, and his black suspenders.

Einstein, or more formally known as Steve, is habitually seen with a drink in hand dancing the night away mixed in with all of Monmouth University’s finest. When asked, students were quick to tell stories about this Monmouth County legend.

Monmouth students do not really know any serious information about Steve. Maria Merlos, a Senior Psych major and the President of the senior class jokingly stated, “He’s kind like a mystery.”

Then the stories started pouring in. Monmouth students have been passing around stories about this Einstein imposter for years! Ryan Ranahan, a Marketing senior stated, “Yea, I see him all the time when I’m out. He just likes to go out and have a good time like the rest of us. I actually took a picture with him last time.”

Einstein has touched the lives of people outside of Monmouth County as well. One of Ranahan’s friends from North Jersey named Elvis stated, “He is where all the chicks are at. Any good parties...he likes getting drunk.”

Aside from these stories about his personality, some students shared some rumors they have heard about Einstein. Some of the stories were ridiculous, such as, “Oh, Einstein...yeah I know him — I’d say more like Bozo mixed with Einstein. I heard his real profession is clown by day, bar hopper by night,” said Heather Engelken, a senior History and Education major.

Former Monmouth University student Vinny Sapienza said, “My friends joke about him being an overprotective father watching his daughter out at bars to make sure she is ok. Every time we wanna get

FRANKIE MORALÉS

Although we’ve been trained to stand on the rooftops and sing our hearts out, it’s that time of the week when you have to jump back in the elevator and take it down to The Ground Floor.

Welcome back for another edition of a growing Outlook tradition, that delivers breaking music news up and coming artists and gap-filling commentary designed to keep you in the know.

This week, we take a look at a man with a plan to change this land with the help of his back-up band (rhythm is fun).

At the age of 12, Texas’ own, Bryce Avary began his career in music performing at local venues in Dallas-Fort Worth. By the age of 16, he was the most requested local act in the area and got to work releasing an EP. Today, Avary has developed a clothing line, gained the support of the pop-punk/indie/power-pop music community, and has begun a campaign for change (a popular thing to do nowad-ays) among his listeners under the moniker, The Rocket Summer.

Equipped with piano-driven melodies, drum-heavy tempos, harmonic guitar riffs, and a variety of drumming techniques, Bryce Avary of The Rocket Summer channels the energy of the Indie/Punk/Alternative rock crowd through fashion. You can check out the recently created clothing line “Call It Captivate” in hopes of expressing art through fashion, to inspire, to educate, and most importantly, to work as an outlet to encourage people to give to those in need.”

The idea is to take at the very least, 20% of the proceeds garnered from clothing sales and donate it to the charity of the buyer’s choice.

Effectively, the revolutionary idea is that pop is not only indulged in the worlds of music, entertainment and fashion as they already do, but get them directly responsible for helping to improve situations all over.

However, for The Rocket Summer has done a lot themselves to improve the situation of music, which is what the core of this article is all about. Be it songs that have stood the test of time with his fan base as “Brat Pack,” off his first EP, to chilling renditions of such songs as Colin Hay’s (You know, he sung that song “I Come From A Land Down Under?” No? Maybe you know him as that guy that follows J.D. with a guitar on Scrubs, then?) “I Just Don’t Think I’ll Get Over You.”

The Rocket Summer has a catalogue that will tug on every emotion with great detail and passion, from happy and joyous to inspired and hopeful to motivating and energetic, it’s all covered.

For a short range of all those emotions, check out MySpace. Com/TheRocketSummer and give it a listen. If you like what you hear and want to hear more, then you’ll be happy to learn that once the band finishes their current headlining tour, they will head back into the studio to record their next full length.

In the meantime, let’s all take a page out of Bryce’s playbook and “Get off your feet and make this count”.

Also, as a quick follow up to issue one, Fall Out Boy’s upcoming album Folie a Deux, has been pushed back from its original Election Day release to an unknown date to be decided on by the label. The band promises to build upon the release, however, with more exclusive, songs and even small club shows for loyal fans.

The reason for the push is to not draw attention away from one of the most important elections in this nation’s history, giving you all the opportunity to follow the advi-ce of this column and get hands-on with your future.

More updates on the release will follow, which are sure to leave you the same way I hope you leave this column: floored.

Nelly Returns with Brass Knuckles

LISA RIAKIDOU GRADUATE ASSISTANT

Best known for his hits from the early part of the decade, Nelly finally released a new album, "Brass Knuckles." Selling over 30 million albums to date, it was about time for him to put his name back in the game after taking a hiatus to do a bit of acting, start multiple charities, and do work on his clothing line. Nelly’s most recent release is the follow up to his releasing of "Sweat" and "Suit." Prior to his 2004 double release, Nelly released an album of remixes in 2003 based on his first two albums: "Nellyville" and "Country Grammar." Although "Brass Knuckles" was released later than anticipated, it features many artists and is totally stacked with talent. Featured on the album were Rick Ross, LL Cool J, Snoop Dogg, T.I., Nate Dogg, Ciara, Jermaine Dupri, Pharrell, the St. Lunatics, Avery Storm, Gucci Mane, Fergie, and R. Kelly.

The album’s various versions have a total of five bonus tracks. Not counting the bonus tracks, there is just one track that does not have a featured guest musician: "One & Only." Not only is one track that does not have a featured guest musician: "One & Only." The least serious song on the album is "Lie." The song appears to be the weakest track on the album but if you don’t take it seriously it is one of the funniest. Nelly goes back to his roots and rejoins with his R&B power ballad and one of the only serious emotionally charged tracks on the album. When her father is called into war, Mulan decides to secretly take his place as a warrior and risks her life to save her country. Mulan, the daughter of the Fa family who is a beautiful and confident young girl who defies odds to become a great warrior, is nothing like returning to your childhood with a classic Disney film like Mulan.

Nelly goes back to his roots and rejoins with the St. Lunatics to write a song about a girl calling out her boyfriend, "Choose," featuring LL Cool J and T.I. is a fun song that talks up Nelly and puts down the wannabes. He calls everyone out to step up their game or sit down. Although it could be looked at as a cocky song boasting about Nelly’s successes, it really is just a fun song.

The captivating compositions include a bit of angst, conscious doubt, politico-hate, and risks her life to save her country. After the manic-brilliance of "Prior" is debatably the best single on the album, "Warrior," the typical upbeat anthem Nelly track. Nelly returns with a song about shoes on the album. Already released as a single with a music video already completed, "Stopped on My 2's" featuring two big name musicians, Ciara and Jermaine Dupri, is an upbeat fun song without much meaning, similar to Nelly’s "Air Force Ones." Overall, Nelly does not come out swinging on the newest album but he does not fall flat either. "Brass Knuckles" is stacked with talent and fun tracks but Nelly’s long hiatus from the music scene, with his mediocre track, "Grillz" being his last Billboard chart hit, may have something to do with his lack of publicity and chatter for the new release. The album contains what the public has come to expect from Nelly: a little bit of everything, a lot of catchy but a few party songs that hopefully will get spins in the clubs.

Best New Music Presents TV On The Radio

BRIAN ZABINSKI CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The guys of TV on the Radio clean up their sound for their new catchy album Dear Science.

"Halfway Home" sets the tone for the album. The jamming hooks style pop vocals and hand claps that explode all over the track bring tenor to the big synth choruses that tension and then elevate it to the breaking point. Even with slick production, the song does not sound overdone. "Golden Age"—lyrically sits uneasily with its ultimate message. While strung through the clouds on this track, TV On The Radio don’t sound optimistic or rebellious but more uncertain of the impending future. Ky Manone, multi-instrumentalist and lead-singer along with Aedembimpe, has said that the song is about "utopia," which in musical definition means, "no place." The way Dear Science balances its pop aspirations and multilayered melting-pot mix of styles, with a lyrical landscape of self-consciousness, along with laser-like production and fear of the future, makes it an ever-engaging concoction.

Financial Outlook for our Future

With the upcoming election at hand, it might be advantageous if we students got more involved these next few weeks in seeking ways to unite.

With the upcoming election at hand, it might be advantageous if we students got more involved these next few weeks in seeking ways to unite. By sending messages through word of mouth, letter-writing, e-mails and other forms of communications, we can let our candidates and legislative leaders become more aware of our needs as individuals who have devoted much time, energy and money — not to mention hope — in preparing for our lives.

The answers to solving the economic problems our nation has accumulated is not to incur greater debt; somehow our priorities need to be re-examined. We need cash, not the warmth of a camaraderie of community service events. The only thing that can help to facilitate our inter-relational existence, and learning through involvement in local, state and federal government, corporate activities and educational.

Use your brains while and after you've here, a lesson that years later you'll wish you had learned if you do not now. Life will bring many chances, but each chance counts. So make the best of each moment here count, too.

Because after that cap and gown is discarded, the honesty of the job search outlook could slap us right in the face with a big fat snowball. I'd much rather be basking in the sunlight and freedom of the diplomas we one day hope to proudly grasp in our hands! Flexibility, determination, wise choices, but most importantly, optimistic attitudes and enduring input and output of scholastic goals should be the ultimate objective shadowing us against these worrisome statistics that create within us a heated response and log for the vision of our future. Hard work, good study habits, withstanding test-taking jitters, and going the "extra mile" by extracurricular on-campus activity might shuffle the cards in our favor.

Thank you so much for your support!

Pep Band,

Great job performing at the Columbus Day Parade! We more than satisfied our goal to have fun, and the crowd loved us. Also, big thanks to Jesse and Hunter for adding to our performing forces, and thanks to Susette for inviting them. More thanks to the friends and parents who helped us out with rides, marshaling, and setting up. We have rehearsals on Wednesday, Oct. 15 from 7:30-9:00, and on Wednesday, Oct. 22, we will have a t-shirt painting party for homecoming. Don’t forget, homecoming week is NEXT week!

Interested in being part of our performances? New members are always welcome; if you’re interested, please stop by at any of our rehearsals!

SIGMA TAU GAMMA

SAB has had a few exciting events so far this semester, and we are looking forward to many more. Dippin Dots and Photos were a big hit at “Up Til Dawn” and both ran out fast. We enjoyed the awareness event of ‘Rock the Vote’ last night; it was very informative and had a good turnout, and we got to meet Rachel and Shane from Road Rules! This week we are having comedian Rob O’Reilly come to campus on Wednesday Oct 15th at 9:00 pm in the Underground, which is located in Elmwood Hall. Rob uses raunchy humor which would appeal to a broad audience. We look forward to the students coming to this event and having a great time. Is there a better way to distress from midterm than laughing it away? This weekend we are taking a trip to the Eastern State Penitentiary, for a scary and amusing tour of the former maximum security prison. Next Wednesday the 22nd, there will be a karaoke night, also held in the Underground. If you like to sing karaoke and want to bring your friends, we encourage you to come and join in the fun! Also on the 22nd, from 2-4 in the Student Center will be decorate your own cakes. Bring some friends and creativity and get your sweet reward. There are only 9 spots left on the Disney trip, so stop by the Office of Student Activities to have a magical time over winter break. If there are any questions or concerns please feel free to contact the Student Activities Board at 732-923-4704 or email us at sab@monmouth.edu. We hope to see you at our upcoming events!

ATTENTION CLUB AND GREEKS!!! SOMETHING NEWS ABOUT YOUR ORGANIZATION THAT YOU WANT TO SHARE WITH THE REST OF CAMPUS? EMAIL THEOUTLOOK@MONMOUTH.EDU WITH SUBMISSIONS BY MONDAY NIGHTS. THANK YOU!

PHI SIGMA KAPPA

Well it’s been a while since the last time we filled everyone in about the fraternity, so there’s a lot to talk about but we’ll try to keep it short. Most recently we participated in the Big Event and everyone did a great job helping out the community. We haven’t written a report since before our new class got in, so a big congrats is due to those little love bugs. Rumor has it you can find Yoshi in Mt. Laurel on his hands and knees. And if you’re looking for Turtle, West Morgan is a great place to start. Dad on the other hand has wised up and doubled his pleasure and his own shoes now. Thanks Michelle! However not all of our brothers have gone the sensitive route, Sloth and Toodles are definitely still on the market. On that note, if you’re still on the hunt but you haven’t found a better deal. Maybe he should look to Beowulf to be his shoulder to cry on, he seems to be pretty good at that these days. Until next time this is Blanche, signing off.

THE OUTLOOK

Are you interested in writing about current events here on campus, a CD or movie review, have an opinion to voice, or simply enjoy writing or taking pictures? Looking for a place to share all of your creative ideas? If you answered yes, or have any other ideas, come and be part of The Outlook.

The Outlook, Monmouth University’s student-run newspaper, is looking for someone who is interested in submitting entries to be published. Without the voices of Monmouth University students, the paper would not be a success. The meetings are held in Plan gere, room 260, every Monday at 5:30 and again at 9:00. If you can’t make the meetings, don’t worry - send us an e-mail at outlook@monmouth.edu and let us know what you would be interested in contributing. Thank you!

OUTDOORS CLUB

The Outdoors Club started off the semester with a big splash, going white water rafting down the Lehigh Gorge on October 5th. We stayed close to home on Friday with a hike and Barbecue at Sandy Hook. For the Big Event we cleaned up Deal Lake and went on a hike around the lake and found some obscure objects - a boat, bicycle, a doll and lots of trash. The group scaled the walls of the Garen State Rocks last Thursday. A weekend camping trip and a spelunking through the caves of Pennsylvania are in the works for November. Have any ideas for future events? Let us know! The next trip is on October 15, 2008 CLUB & GREEK Th

Aries (Mar. 21 - April 19) - This week is a 6
Trying to figure out how to sort out your life? Wait till the weekend comes to figure out exactly what you want to do but while you're sorting it all out, be careful not to push it all on everyone else.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20) - This week is a 7
You were worrying about the wrong thing! That's okay: take some time to figure out how to deal with what you now see as the issue. You have plenty of ideas that will work, just figure out which one will work best!

Gemini (May 21 - June 21) - This week is a 6
Trying to figure out how to sort out your life? Wait till the weekend comes to figure out exactly what you want to do but while you're sorting it all out, be careful not to push it all on everyone else.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22) - This week is a 7
Why is it you cannot figure out what you want? Well over the next 6 days you are finally figuring just that out but keep it to yourself until you're 100 percent sure. You will figure it out. Just breathe.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) - This week is a 9
Smile! The fog is clearing and you can finally see the way. The best part of starting something is finishing it. Once you get that satisfaction you see a few options. Do not go down one path or the other until the end of the week when you know for sure what you want because, for once, it's all about you!

Virgo (Aug. 23- Sept. 22) - This week is an 8
Virgo everywhere are going to cringe midweek this week because they cannot control everything. Look around you and see what the world is telling you! By Sunday you will finally understand.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23) - This week is a 10
You are stepping up, taking charge and paying close attention. It does not seem like a hassle and it is totally worth it. By this weekend you are the center of attention and you love every minute of it. Be social, have a blast, and the week will end better than you could have even hoped for.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21) - This week is a 9
Things are definitely still going right for you. Work now and play all weekend. It's tough to buckle down and get things done when everyone is out having fun but if you can get it done now, this weekend is the perfect time for you to shine.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21) -This week is an 8
The week started off okay but now you are not sure what to do, where to go, how to get moving. Relax! You have great ideas and are getting things done so take a step back. By the end of the weekend, you realize you have accomplished so much. Enjoy yourself!

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) - This week is a 6
Stressing out does not help. Have fun! The only way to make it out of life alive (yes out of life) is to enjoy yourself. Gather the troops and live! Do not let impending midterms get you down.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) - This week is a 6
Feeling like some things are going perfect while other aspects of your life are crashing down? Well figure out why some things succeed and others are failing flat. Once you make that realization you can kick it in to high gear and bring everything up to that higher level. By the time you are done doing all of that, take a break. You may need it.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20) This week is an 8
Well, it happened. You decided you need a change. Take it one step at a time or else you are bound to fall. If you start changing the revolution will begin! Go out, have some fun, and get others excited about life. Your emotional wellbeing is as important as your scholastic and mental.

October 15, 2008  ANNOUNCEMENTS  The Outlook 29
The Monmouth Hawks went on the road on Saturday, October 11, and defeated the Wagner Seahawks 31-17. The win gave the Blue and White their fourth straight victory and moved them to 3-0 in North-east Conference play. The loss put the Seahawks at 2-4 on the season and 0-4 in the NEC. This game was a real test for the Hawks heading into their bye week. The game was tied at 17 heading into the fourth quarter and the next fifteen minutes decided whether the Hawks three wins or three losses were more telling.

Quarterback Brett Burke answered the call as he led his team down the field and connected with John Nalbone on a 16 yard touchdown pass with 6:48 to go in the game, putting the Hawks ahead 24-17. The defense stepped up big in the second half. After the special teams pin the Seahawks at their own 22 yard line with four minutes to go in the game, the Hawks were forced to settle for a Jack Daniels punt, which gave the Seahawks the ball back at their 15 yard line. After two impressive runs by Ryan Middleton, Abbey dropped back and was picked off on the Wagner 22 yard line with just over four minutes to go in the game. This time the defense came out and forced another Matt Abbey interception their last drive, came out running the football as Sinisi took the ball 22 yards to pay dirt. This sealed the victory for the Blue and White giving them a 14-0 advantage heading into halftime.

The decision to defer after winning the coin toss paid off as Monmouth on only four plays from scrimmage went 61 yards for a touchdown. Rushing the football once again proved beneficial to the Hawks as Sinisi ended the drive with a 32 yard touchdown gallop putting his team in the lead by a score of 17-14.

To their credit the Seahawks did not back down at any point during the game. After the defense gave up the lead yet again, the offense marched back down the field. On a ten play, 52 yard drive, Ortiz connected on a 34 yard field goal to even the score once again. The teams then traded possesions with either team unable to muster a whole lot of offense. The game remained in a 17-17 stalemate going into the fourth quarter. Finally with just over ten minutes to go in the game the Monmouth offense broke through.

Through a balanced attack of Sinisi rushes and Burke passes the Hawks struck on a 16 yard scoring pass Burke to his tight end John Nalbone. After another successful Weingart extra point the Hawks were ahead 24-17 with just over six minutes to go in the game. It was now up to the defense to hold the lead for the Blue and White and they got the job done and some. On second and ten from the Wagner 41 yard line T.J. Cerezo forced another Matt Abbey fumble and if you were wondering why I called Joe Valentri Mr. Johnny on the spot earlier it is because he not only recovered one loose ball but two as he jumped on the Seahawks fumble.

The Hawk offense then came out and it was more of the same from as Sinisi got the first carry and took the ball 22 yards to pay dirt. This sealed the victory for the Blue and White giving them a 14 point advantage with just over four minutes to play. The Seahawks failed to put anything together offensively for the rest of the game and the Hawks offense could look forward to a pleasant trip home.

Monmouth will have their bye week this week and then will return to Kessler field for Homecoming on the 29th of October against Central Connecticut State. Outlook’s Weekly NFL Picks - Week 6
